

“I have such a full life at Duke.”

- NAOMI HARRIS T'10

Naomi Harris T'10 has a work-study job as an admissions tour guide, and she enjoys sharing her Duke experience with prospective students. She talks about classes and professors, favorite places to study, and financial aid. “Duke’s aid package made it less expensive for me to come here than it would have been to stay home and attend the University of Illinois,” she said. “That’s how I knew Duke really wanted me here.”

DUKE'S FINANCIAL AID INITIATIVE

Naomi has wanted to be a doctor since she was putting Band-aids on dolls, and at Duke, she’s taking pre-med courses. It’s a heavy academic load, but she still makes time to enjoy other aspects of campus life. She performs at Durham-area churches as a member of the United in Praise gospel choir, and you can see her at football and basketball games cheering wildly and playing flute and piccolo in the marching band.
