

“At Duke, you have the chance to be original.”

-ANDREW TUTT E'09

Andrew Tutt E'09 remembers searching Duke's website for the phrase “get involved” the summer before his freshman year. By the time he arrived on campus, he'd joined a Pratt School mentoring program and secured a place in a plant pathologist's research lab. “It's incredible to think that, without financial aid, I wouldn't be here,” said the Davis, Ca., native. “I'm a Snowdon Scholar,” he added. “I'm always proud to be able to say that.”

DUKE'S FINANCIAL AID INITIATIVE

A biomedical engineering and economics double major, Andrew is making the most of his time at Duke. He started the student-run Duke Journal of Public Affairs and launched “Wired 2 Achieve,” an organization that refurbishes computers and donates them to the Durham community. He's built websites for several nonprofits and student groups, and he performs 20+ shows a year with the Duke University Improv comedy troupe.
